DEP is actively engaged in addressing the connection between land use choices and the environment. This effort was begun in 1998 with the release of the 21st Century Environment Commission report, which identified “responsible land use” as the number one environmental issue facing Pennsylvania in the 21st Century. The momentum gained through the early stages of implementation of recommendations of the report continued through 2000 culminating in policies based on the revisions to the Municipalities Planning Code enacted by the passage of Acts 67 and 68.
